Councilwoman criticizes campaign conduct

A complaint regarding a Facebook post prompted members of the Romulus City Council to call for more civility in political campaigns.

Byron Butler, a 59-year resident of the community, spoke to the council members during the public comment portion of the regular meeting July 12. Butler explained that he was "very upset" regarding a Facebook post which he characterized as an attack on himself and his wife. He said that the post was on a site managed by Mayor LeRoy Burcroff's wife and that the mayor had also made a comment on the post which he found offensive to himself and to his wife.

> "No resident, no employee, no business, should have to suffer what was done to me. This was shameful, hateful.

"My wife and I have never posted anything about the Burcroffs, negative or otherwise," he said. "Who I support or vote for is my business." He said that he could not understand how anyone could attack his wife whom he described as "the most positive, kindhearted person who likes everyone."

Butler's comments brought a swift response from Councilwoman Virginia Williams who said that such conduct during an election should not be allowed and that law enforcement should offer more help to those victimized during election campaigns. She said during her campaign last November she had been targeted by vandalism at her home.

"I have not spoken about this before," she said. "During the campaign, black paint was poured over the back of my home. There was $50,000 in damage," she said. "No resident, no employee, no business should have to suffer what was done to me. This is a democracy. I don't want to hear of anyone suffering what I suffered," she said. "This was shameful, hateful."

Williams said she received no help from the city police department with her complaints of the damage done to her home, her damaged patio furniture and eggs thrown at her home. She cautioned Burcroff that as the "chief law enforcement officer of the city" it was his responsibility to take action now to protect people. "Mayor, if you're not going to do anything, someone else will have to step in," she said, sug-

Members of the Belleville Rotary Club, Sumpter Township officials and community residents are all smiles at the dedication of the Peter Quenet memorial bench at the Belleville Library Satellite Media Center.

Area residents crowded the Belleville Satellite Library Media Center last week to remember a beloved member of the community.

A bench outside the facility, tied with a huge red bow, was officially dedicated to the memory of Peter Quenet, a long time resident of Belleville who died in 2017. The tribute to Mr. Quenet was instigated by members of the Belleville Rotary Club where he had 40 years of perfect attendance.

Belleville Library Director Mary Jo Suchy welcomed the public to the official dedication and urged residents to use the media center where several computer stations are available for use. The bench is outside the front door of the facility, which is located at 23465 Sumpter Road, directly across the street from Sumpter Township Hall, and includes a small brass plaque. Members of Mr. Quenet's family, including his wife of 21 years, Debbie Juchartz, were present for the dedication.

Mr. Quenet, who moved to Sumpter Township in 1971, served on the Sumpter Township Planning Commission and also served in several offices during his four-decades with the Rotary Club. He was born in Bideford, England and spent his first nine years in France. His family moved back to London during World War II and Mr. Quenet was among the children evacuated to America to avoid the Blitz, and was on the same ship as Elizabeth Taylor and Roddy McDowall. He returned to England where he graduated from the University of London with a Mechanical Engineering degree. He proudly served a military tour as a lieutenant with the Royal Engineers in Malaya. Upon discharge from the 17th Gurkha Regiment, he assumed a position with Ford Service Engineering where he developed a lifelong love of motorsports and rugby. Later he became the service manager for English Ford, which involved training dealers from Maine to North Carolina.

The bench, along with the installation and ongoing maintenance, was funded by the Belleville Rotary Club as a tribute to Mr. Quenet's service and dedication to the community. The Sumpter branch of the library features internet, wireless, printing, scanning, copying and faxing. but no book collection is on site.

Court decision stalls Salem Springs development plan

It may not be the end, but a years-in-the-planning development which abuts Plymouth Township has hit another snag in the Washtenaw County Circuit Court.

In a rural area on the northeast edge of Washtenaw County in an area of Salem Township known as the Urban Service District (USD), a battle continues about the need for sewer lines crucial to a proposed planned community.

Lawsuits and controversy continue to surround the project dubbed Salem Springs, the brainchild of Livonia-based developer Schostek Brothers and Company, Inc. and plans to begin construction of Salem Springs South - a retail and residential development in a 200-acre triangle of mostly vacant land bordered by M-14, Gotfredson, North Territorial and Napier roads. According to those knowledgeable about the details, the 588-unit high-density development reportedly will include townhouses, detached condominiums and single-family homes. To the south of M-14 will be Salem Springs North, a mixed-use development that will include retail, residential and possible big box stores.

Prior to development the vacant Salem Township property requires access to wastewater treatment in order to proceed.

According to court filings, Salem Township investigated the feasibility of connecting to various alternative public sewage disposal systems, including Plymouth Township, Lyon Township, and Western Townships Utilities Authority (WTUA), Wayne County and Ypsilanti Community Utilities Authority (YCUA).

Plymouth Township Supervisor Kurt Heise is insistent he and the board of trustees don't want Salem Township hooking up to Plymouth Township sewer lines.

Plymouth Township officials for years have expressed their disapproval of the $20 million Michigan Economic Development (MDEC) grants and made it clear they are taking a firm stand against the Salem Springs development.

Heise said Plymouth officials continue to question the possible impact of the development on the infrastructure and public safety and the basis for the state funding of what he calls, "urban sprawl." In order for the Salem Springs to connect to the Organization assessment is considered by trustees

Julie Brown
Special Writer

Recommendations of a recent study of Canton Township government which included focus groups and employee interviews, were presented to the members of the township board of trustees last week.

Details of the study prompted officials to request another meeting this week for more discussion of the organizational assessment.

The study results were presented by Michelle Ferguson and Mark Olson of the Novak Consulting Group during a regular meeting of the trustees on July 13. The $47,125 study was funded through the general fund of the township budget.

"I would like to see more of how we explore some of those recommendations," said Trustee Sommer Foster of the 27 listed in the lengthy report, including how to best proceed when Canton becomes more "built out".

Trustee Steven Sneideman mentioned "peer communities" for comparisons, and cited township employees "as the people who know our community the best." He asked about details on the budgeting process as well as water rate studies.

"We've got amazing human capital here," said Township Clerk Michael Siegrist. During the Zoom meeting, Supervisor Anne Marie Graham-Hudak noted that there were a number of township employees present, although none spoke during public comments.

The organizational assessment excluded the police and fire departments, although those directors were interviewed during the process. The focus groups included 28 staffers, and 25 in-person employee interviews were conducted, as well as interviews with each of the seven elected officials.

> The focus groups included 28 staffers, and 25 in-person employee interviews were conducted.

One recommendation from the analysis was the formation of a separate IT department with a dedicated director. The study also recommended adding a deputy township supervisor to work with Graham-Hudak. Olson also cited an employee evaluation program that could include union workers, as well as succession planning.

"People want to know what they're doing, how well they're doing," said Olson, also citing the need to assess sourcing of township legal services. That can be a big ticket item, he noted

Trustee Kate Borninski asked how the board of trustees will proceed and set priorities from the assessment, which is set for discussion at the meeting this week.

In other business, trustees unanimously OK'd a $2.50 an hour raise effective July 25 for some Leisure Services workers, excluding not interns.

Graham-Hudak and Siegrist noted the current labor shortages, and Director of Leisure Services Greg Hohenberger added many part-time staffers will return to school soon. The Summit facility is now closed on Sundays, he said.

"We've been getting some push-back on that," said Graham-Hudak of the Sunday closure.

There's also a $100 employee referral incentive, provided that worker works 250 hours in the first six months. Siegrist noted many people not only seek good pay but also rewarding work, and aren't willing to trade their time for certain jobs with limited rewards.

Official dedication of newest park pavilion is planned

The new open-air pavilion at Preservation Park in Canton Township will officially open during a ribbon cutting set for 5:30 p.m. Aug. 3.

Township officials including Supervisor Ann Marie Graham-Hudak will attend the event along with members of the board of trustees and area elected officials.

The Preservation Park pavilion features a large under-roof seating capacity, electrical service, a concession service window, and three individual restrooms. The 70-feet by 32-feet structure was designed to provide much-needed shade and seating in the park, as well as a covered lunch area for the Canton Farmers Market visitors, officials said.

"Canton is grateful to be able to provide this wonderful amenity to the community in one of our true gems in our parks system," said Canton Leisure Services Director Greg Hohenberger. "Visitors to Preservation Park have already embraced the pavilion as a way to further extend their enjoyment of the park and will surely make it another popular host site for outdoor events and casual gatherings."

Significantly funded by a Wayne County Park Millage, the open-air pavilion is currently being used as a gathering place, dining space, and outdoor classroom space for Canton Leisure Services events and programs and will also be available for rent for picnics, parties, outdoor events, and other events.

Located in Cherry Hill Village, Preservation Park is home to several historic Canton properties, as well as the Canton Farmers Market, which takes place from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. every Sunday through Oct. 17 - rain or shine.

Closely following the Preservation Park Pavilion grand opening "Bites for the Barn," the newest al fresco dining experience in Canton, will take place from 6-8 p.m. in the new park pavilion. Tickets for this small plate dining experience must be purchased in advance by July 30 at www.cantonfun.org. The per person fee to attend is $35 for Canton residents and $46 for non-residents. Tickets will include four to five small plates; beer and wine will be sold separately.

For more information about the new Preservation Park Pavilion and other Canton amenities, visit www.cantonfun.org or call (734) 394-5360. Preservation Park is located at 500 N. Ridge Road.

ROMULUS - SUMPTER

Marijuana proposal 'flames out' in Sumpter

After much discussion and comment from audience members, a meeting agenda item to opt in and allow medical and/or recreational marijuana facilities in Sumpter Township failed when none of the trustees made a formal motion on the question.

The item was placed on the agenda by Trustee Peggy Morgan who then failed to make a formal motion for approval after hearing comments from members of the public during the July 12 meeting of the board of trustees. The previous board of trustees voted against opting into allowing marijuana facilities three years ago and that status quo was praised by Richard Harrison, who spoke during the public comment portion of teh agenda. He told the trustees that he was concerned that the administrative expenses for allowing the facilities exceeded or matched any revenue the township might realize. He also expressed his concern about crime that might ensue at the facilities and the increased cost to the police department.

Also addressing the board of trustees was Eric Foster of Banks and Company, which he described as a public relations firm. He spoke at great length urging the board members to postpone any decision until his firm could offer administrative advice and counsel regarding the state regulations regarding the allocation of licenses and the legal jeopardy of local municipal regulations without research and legal advice.

He described his company as "a free resource to you" and cautioned the board members that they were "not in a place to make a decision. Take the time to do proper due diligence," he urged the trustees.

> I didn't put this on the agenda, you did. This is not my motion or proposal.

Another resident also urged the board to research the issue and to find a professional urban planner to help plan the location of any such facility, if approved. "Find someone familiar with planning before handing out permission," he said.

A long-time resident told the board members that three years ago it was determined that the expense of the facilities overrode the profit and the board at that time denied opting into the businesses. "I am very much against this," she said.

Later in the meeting, Morgan questioned township attorney Rob Young's billings for work done on researching current state, county and federal regulations regarding marijuana facilities.

Morgan repeatedly questioned the number of hours Young had billed in pursuing the legal regulations and consequences of allowing the facilities into the township.

"The supervisor requested that I look into and research this and provide him and the board with the current regulations," Young said. "I didn't put this on the agenda, you did. This is not my motion or proposal," he said. Young detailed the extensive research he had completed on the issue, again reminding Morgan that this was her motion.

Morgan continued to argue that approval of "opting in" to allowing marijuana facilities during the meeting would not allow the immediate application for permits or licenses in the township, a claim disputed by other members of the board.

When the agenda item was announced for consideration, there was no motion and no second, leaving the current township ordinances against marijuana facilities in place.

Staffing shortages stalling Romulus trash pick-ups

Members of the Romulus City Council addressed the numerous complaints regarding residential trash pick up during their July 12 meeting.

Romulus Department of Public Works Director Roberto Scappaticci spoke to the council members and acknowledged the high volume of complaints regarding late or missed trash pick up in the city. He explained that the city trash hauler, Republic Waste Management, was experiencing a labor shortage and was impacted by the amount of rubbish and trash taken to curbs for pickup as a result of the recent flooding throughout the area.

Scappaticci introduced Republic Management official Keith Pine to the council members for a more comprehensive explanation of the difficulties residents have been experiencing.

Pine, a 33-year veteran of Waste Management, said that he had been personally responsible for the Romulus area for 15 years, "so I take it very personally."

He said Scappaticci was correct in that the trash hauler had been inundated trying to remove debris from homes following the recent flood, but that a labor shortage also impacted the business.

> If people put the trash at the curb and it isn't picked up, leave it, and we will get there.

"We are doing everything in our power to hire. We have increased wages, we offer free college to all employees, benefits from day on, tuition reimbursement," he said. "We have had our yard in Romulus for 25 years. We are part of this community. We're not going anywhere," he said.

He acknowledged that pick-ups have been missed or late, but said with a number of new hires, some still in training, pick-ups should now be only 24-hours late, if not on time.

In response to a question from Councilwoman Kathy Abdo, he explained that residents should leave the trash and debris at the curb if it is not picked up at the regular time.

"If people put the trash at the curb and it isn't picked up, leave it, and we will get there," he said.

Pine said the company recently hired eight new drivers and have four more in the hiring process. "We have a lot of employees and we fought to keep them," he said. He explained, too, that in light of the current issue with so much flooding damage, larger items can also be put at the curb for pickup.

"We will pick it up with the regular trash," Pine said. "It would be nice if residents could call and let us know in advance, but we will pick it up."

Pine said he would supply phone numbers and QR codes to the city so that details of the delays and scheduling could be publicized on the city website and social media.

gesting she would notify the state police if others are victimized.

"I would like you to step in now. I want something done now," Williams said.

Councilwoman Eva Webb said that when she campaigned for office, her signs were burned and pulled up and destroyed.

"For this to happen to the Butlers of all people," she said. "Their family are pillars of the community. They don't bother anyone," she said.

Councilwoman Tina Talley apologized to Butler on behalf of the city and suggested that she, Burcroff and Butler meet after the meeting to discuss the situation and try to "come together and work it out."

Burcroff agreed and said that the post in question had been taken down. He suggested that Butler talk to him personally about the issue.

"I'd like to have a person to person conversation. I do apologize if we did something wrong," he said. "We all know that Facebook is a dangerous tool. What's on Facebook isn't always true. I am not here to offend anyone. On behalf of my family, I am sorry," he told Butler and the council members.

Burcroff opted not to seek re-election this year.

Northville, Plymouth projects receive federal funding

Northville and Plymouth were among the communities awarded a portion of nearly $18 million in federal funding Rep. Haley Stevens secured for areas in the 11th Congressional District.

"I am thrilled to announce that so many community projects ranging from infrastructure, to funding for police departments to the construction of new public spaces for seniors and families to use in Michigan's 11th District will now be fully funded," said Stevens in a prepared statement. "My staff and I have been working for months with mayors, township supervisors, local and statewide elected officials from both parties to determine the greatest needs in our communities. Every community project that was identified and submitted to the House Appropriations Committee was funded. When we invest in our communities, they thrive, and this funding will impact countless lives throughout our district."

In Northville, the Michigan International Technology Center Improvement Project was awarded $2 million.

The grant will fund the engineering costs associated with the rebuilding of Five Mile Road, between Beck and Ridge roads. The Michigan International Technology Center (MITC) Redevelopment District is a Brownfield Authority created by Plymouth and Northville townships and the State of Michigan Land Bank. The project was designed to bring jobs and economic development to the former Detroit House of Correction (DeHoCo) Prison sites along Five Mile Road from Napier to Beck, which is the boundary between Plymouth and Northville townships. The project will also clean up contaminated sites owned by the State of Michigan. This federal funding for the MITC Improvement Project will help to increase accessibility to the project area, facilitating economic growth for the whole community, according to Haley's office.

> When we invest in our communities, they thrive, and this funding will impact countless lives throughout our district.

The Plymouth Cultural Center ADA Compliance Project was awarded $400,000.

The ADA Compliance Project at the center will update the four main public restrooms in the recreation facility to achieve full ADA compliance. The Plymouth Cultural Center is the only voting location in the city, and it accommodates four precincts. The building hosts multiple senior citizen classes, events and health clinics. Increasingly, City of Plymouth boards and commissions and local civic organizations use the large room in the building for meetings to accommodate socially distant participants. In addition, the cultural center, which is home to an ice arena, hosts hundreds of athletic events every year with thousands of players and spectators. Bringing the center restrooms up to full ADA compliance will require structural changes to the building and major plumbing work, since the current system is encased in a concrete slab. Interior walls, ceilings, fixtures, partitions and tile will need to be replaced, according to officials. Bringing the restrooms to ADA compliance will allow elderly visitors and persons with disabilities to use the facility without hindrance, officials added.

Stevens submitted several Community Project Funding requests to the Appropriations Committee and every funding request that the Congresswoman submitted was accepted by the Appropriations Committee.

The inclusion of this funding in the Appropriations Committee draft bill is the first step in the funding process. Stevens said she will continue to fight for this funding as the bill moves to the full Appropriations Committee, consideration on the House Floor, and negotiations with the Senate.

Sewers

Plymouth sewer system there would have to be approval by three townships; Plymouth, Northville and Canton. According to Heise, WTUA bi-laws stipulate there must first be a consensus approval.

"Salem has no DPW, a volunteer fire department…this project is ill-conceived and not well thought out. I'm not going to sit back and see taxpayer dollars being wasted, Heise said.

Court records show Salem Township-engaged engineers, Hubbell, Roth & Clark, found numerous factors would prevent sewage going to Plymouth Township and WTUA. According to findings, Salem Township engineers found no alternative source proved to be available or feasible for sewer service to the Salem USD (where the Schostek property is located) except the direct connection to YCUA, using the Superior Township right-of way.

In 2019, after the study, Salem Township made application for a permit to construct a 10.5-mile long sewer line on Godfredson Road from M-14 to Geddes Road, then east on Geddes to Ridge Road, then south on Ridge to the Ypsilanti treatment plant in Superior Township.

Calling it "an ill-conceived project," Superior Township Supervisor Ken Schwartz is adamant about his claim and those of the Township Board of Trustees that if constructed, the sewer line would "have a devastating impact upon our land use and our 45-year goal of preserving some semblance of rural Michigan between Ann Arbor and Canton."

Schwartz sites the fact that Salem Township was the recipient of two $10 million grants over a two year period in 2017 and 2019 by the State of Michigan Legislature that were earmarked for the Schostek project.

"Salem Township never applied for these grants, nor was it even aware that the State Legislature was considering these grants. No one from the state even called Salem Township to inquire about the need. No public hearings were held. No legislator sponsored the grants. The entire process appeared shady," Schwartz said.

The Salem Springs SE, LLC lawsuit alleged that in early 2020, Superior Township deliberately amended its Ordinance Section 169-85 to impose an additional requirement, stating that any and all entities or persons seeing permission to place sewer lines, equipment and appurtenances not owned by or under the control of Superior Township, in a road right of way within the Superior Township to serve areas outside of the Superior Township, must not only must submit an application as previously required but must also" deposit funds into an escrow account…"

Salem Springs SE, LLC responded with a four-count lawsuit against both Superior and Salem townships accusing both communities claim that months before it received their application they had prejudged that it was not going to grant permission and amended its ordinance to "manufacture new obstacles to interfere with the Application."

Circuit Court Judge Patrick Conlin Jr. dismissed counts Two, Three and Four of the Salem lawsuit. Count One alleged Superior Township violated substantive due process. Superior then filed for summary disposition and Salem Springs SE, LLC withdrew the lawsuit, and the case was dismissed, with prejudice.

Legislators approved the grant funding on the last day of the lame duck Legislature session in December 2018. The bill included $115 million for small projects across the state that was championed by Republican senators and representatives, including the project headed by Schostak. Bobby Schostak was former chairman of the state Republican Party.

"My position has not changed. They're going to build hundreds of homes and roads on our border. The township voted two times against this. We oppose the entire project," Heise said.

WAYNE - INKSTER

Hello, Tokyo

Anavia Battle, a native of Inkster and 2017 graduate of Wayne Memorial High School, has qualified for the U.S. Olympic team after running a personal best 21.95 in the 200m qualifying meet June 26. Battle, 22, is a senior at Ohio State University majoring in human development and family sciences. Battle lettered all four years in track and field in high school under the direction of Jamal Jonson and amassed 21 state titles before enrolling at Ohio. She is the daughter of Antoinette Booze-Battle of Inkster and has three siblings, Mintoria, Antoine, and Monte. While she hopes to become a professional athlete following her Olympic appearance, she said her favorite hobbies are watching movies. She finished third in the Olympic trials Eugene, Oregon and is expected to excel during her first Olympic performance.

Community Block Grant to fund trail light installation

Funds from a federal Community Development Block Grant will be used for improvements along Mill Trail in the City of Wayne.

The 1-mile trail, which travels along the edge of the Rouge River parallel to Michigan Avenue, is accessed from Second Street between Glenwrood Road and Sims Street.

Improvements on the path will continue up to Dynamite Park in the city, officials said.

Walkers along the path can view the river although the area is in need of repair, officials said. Grant funds totaling $76,677.13 will be used to install new lights, trash receptacles and even some benches along the popular walking trail.

Officials said the new lighting installations would be performed by DTE and will include the removal of 34 high-pressure sodium lights which will be replaced by 27 new energy-efficient LED lights, installed along the walkway. Officials said the trail is popular and some of the current lights are not working due to damage.

The entire project will be funded through the grant money, officials said, and will make the trail safer for residents to use, especially at night.

Financial help is available for flood damaged homes, property

Area residents affected by the heavy storms and recent flooding on June 25 and 26 have some resources to help mitigate damages the severe weather caused. Wayne County has been granted a Major Disaster Declaration as a result of the mass flooding and assistance for individuals and households is available through the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

Residents who experienced losses due to the rainstorm can apply for the federal assistance by going to www.DisasterAssistance.gov or calling 1-800-621-3362 (TTY: 800-462-7585). The toll-free telephone numbers will operate from 7 a.m. until 9 p.m. seven days a week, officials said.

This federal assistance could include grants for home repairs, low interest loans, and programs for home and business owners, according to an announcement from federal authorities. Residents who may have already filed claims for losses with their local community should also file a claim for federal assistance, officials said, as city claims are separate from the federal relief being offered.

In addition, the State Emergency Relief program provides immediate help to families and individuals facing conditions of extreme hardship or for emergencies that threaten health and safety. It is available to eligible residents that need help with home repairs necessary to correct unsafe conditions and restore essential services.

Applicants must be the owner or purchaser of the home and meet other eligibility requirements - including income limits - to qualify.

The lifetime maximum amount of funds available for non-energy related home repairs is $1,500 per household. State Emergency Relief Program assistance is available for repairs not covered by homeowner's insurance for the basic house structure, hot water heater, septic/waste disposal system, doors/windows, extermination services, electrical, plumbing, roofs and wells.

To apply for State Emergency Relief, visit www.michigan.gov/MIBridges. Anyone who does not have internet access or needs assistance applying can contact their local MDHHS office. Or call 2-1-1 to be referred to other community resources.

Wayne Metro is accepting applications for emergency food and supplies, rent and utility assistance, along with property and income tax assistance. Additionally, Wayne Metro is also accepting applications for the Great Lakes Water Authority WRAP (Water Residential Assistance Program) that provides eligible residents of the GLWA service area with payment assistance and home water conservation services.

Call (313) 388-9799 or visit www.waynemetro.org/ Programs to determine eligibility for these programs.

City hosts open house at Marshall school building

It's sort of an early back to school event for Westland residents.

City officials are hoping the public will visit Marshall Upper Elementary School from 9 a.m. until noon this Saturday, July 24, to take a look at what may become a new community recreation center.

The 120,000 square-foot building, now owned by the Wayne Westland Community Schools district, was closed last year and is slated for demolition, officials said. In February, however, members of the city council approved an agreement with the school district for a potential purchase of the site, following due diligence. Since then, the city has been exploring a potential partnership with the Detroit Metro YMCA to provide services at the building, if it is determined to be suitable.

Officials said the building offers ample space, including two gymnasiums, a track, baseball and football fields, tennis facilities and band rooms. The structure, which would have to be repurposed, could provide adequate space for many programmable community assets, they added.

Officials are hoping for public input into the project and will host a second open house at the former school from 9 a.m. until noon Saturday, July 31.

The school building is located at 35100 Bayview St. in Westland. Those who attend can explore the building during self-guided tours and members of the administration will be in attendance to discuss the potential re-use of the building assets, according to a statement from the city.

"Our team has a lot of great ideas and significant past success with retrofitting vacant space," commented Mayor William R. Wild. "The possibilities are endless and we are excited to hear from the residents on how they envision the site and what they'd like to see added to our recreational amenities."

Community-wide garage sale rescheduled for July 31--Aug. 1.

The Community Wide Garage Sale in Westland has been rescheduled for July 31 and Aug. 1.

Officials said that the recent major storm event which caused property damage and power outages in the city made the postponement of the annual garage sale necessary. The sale was originally scheduled for July 10 and 11 and residents can now register their sale for free on the city website.

As an added incentive to participate, the city will help promote individual residential locations for free on the city website. Individuals will be able to view an interactive map to locate all of the garage sales in the area as well as search for particular items of interest. Visit www.cityofwestland.com to register a sale or to search for garage sales near you.

"The garage sale interactive map will go live on July 14 at 12 p.m.," commented Mayor William R. Wild. "The map is a great tool to streamline your shopping day and to promote your sale."

Residents who do not own a computer can still advertise their sale on the city website by calling Wild's office at (734)467-3200. No garage sale permit needed to participate and registration is not required.

Wayne County has also postponed the Household Hazardous Waste Collection Day which was scheduled for July 10. The county will reschedule this event, which will take place in the parking lot of the Westland Shopping Center, at a later date. For more information, visit www.cityofwestland.com and the Westland social media pages. For more information on Household Hazardous Waste Collection as well as other upcoming events, visit https://www.waynecounty.com/departments/environmental/land-resource-management.aspx .

Family business

It was the passing of the baton last week as veteran police Sgt. Robert Kenyon marked his retirement from the force as he watched his son, Trevor Kenyon, take the official oath of office as he joined the Westland Police Department. The department also celebrated the promotion of officers Jennifer Schurig and Thomas Rogers to the rank of sergeant and welcomed new officers as Sebastian Iavasile, James Serman, Joseph Taylor and Kenyon were officially sworn into office by City Clerk Richard LeBlanc.
